ANOTHER "BOX E" PUBLICATION

The Titanic had two outer propellers driven by reciprocating steam engines, and the exhaust steam from these passed through a turbine which drove a smaller, central propeller. This paragraph has been included because after a start like that, any book can only get better.

THIS is a collection of cartoons which appeared over two or three years in "Nottingham Anarchist News" and other journals of international repute. Any resemblance of the characters in these pages to persons living or still in the labour party is purely spiteful and malicious.

IT would not have been possible without the support and encouragement of my publishers, Chris Cook and Colin Huggins (AKA "Box E"). My thanks to them for not hitting me every time I said "Hey, the book's nearly finished." Thanks also to the great Jaz for printing it.

Please copy and use any of it as you like, unless you're Barclays Bank, Harland & Wolff, the army, Commercial Union Assurance, the RUC, Beeston Rugby Union Football Club, Mushroom Books, certain people I went to school with, that nasty little man who pushed in front of us in the cafeteria queue at Watford Gap Services etc.

Extra copies from Bob Cann, 30 Charlton Grove, Chilwell, Nottingham, NG9 3HU.

IMPROVING MORALE AT WORK:

THE ONLY WAY

THINGS...

CRUNG!

.. IS THROUGH THE BALLOT BOX

Exact figures vary from book to book but from the report of the court of enquiry into the loss of the Titanic, around 63% of first class and 41% of second class passengers were saved.

Many of the third class passengers were Irish emigrants leaving a country bled white by hundreds of years of British imperialism in the hope of a better life in America. Of these only 23% survived.

For all its size, advanced engineering and luxury, the Titanic did not carry enough lifeboats for all its passengers. First and second class passengers were helped into the boats, but third class passengers had to fend for themselves. When all the boats had gone, the majority left on the ship were third class passengers and crew. Those who jumped into the sea were either overwhelmed by intense cold or were unable to get far enough away from the liner to avoid being sucked under as it went down. At the moment the ship disappeared, the White Star Line stopped the pay of those crew members who perished, marking their papers "discharged at sea". Only 24% of the crew survived.

So the rich will always save themselves, leaving us to go on paying for their greed and inhumanity with our lives - and our planet.

When do we start fighting back?
